"The Stampede."

At the time Miss Lillian Buckingham, the star of "The Stampede," which will be seen Tuesday at the Academy, began to collect the data for this brilliant American play, of which she is co-author with Cecil B. De Mille, she was at her Los Angeles residence, looking over her grandfather's diary, where the foul conspiracy against the Wild Creek Indians, which forms the theme of "The Stampede," was originally transcribed. She found that time had literally effaced several pages of the story. In despair, she was on the point of giving up the plan of writing a play, when she learned that a few descendants of Cheyenne, the old Wild Creek chief, were on the reservation in Nevada. A friend undertook the task of locating the tribe, and after a long delay Miss Buckingham received word that the emissary had persuaded Chuckahnee, one of the most intelligent Indians, to start for Los Angeles. They reached the city late one evening, and the Indian stalked majestically along the streets, his eyes distended with amazement at sight of the huge buildings and dazzling shop windows. When they arrived at Miss Buckingham's beautiful suburban home the long journey and attendant excitement accomplished what life on the reservation had not succeeded in doing, and Chuckahnee's eyes were wide open. "What's the matter, Chuckahnee? Why don't you go to sleep?" "Pat him out? Ugh! No can put him out! Him lights in glass bottles!"

"In Panama."

The offering at the Bijou all this week will be the Broadway musical comedy success, "In Panama," with the Klein brothers in the leading comedy parts. That the play has proved so successful is not to be wondered at when the talent involved in making, producing and acting it is considered. The company is one of exceptional merit. There are the stars of the Klein brothers, two of the funniest German comedians on the stage to-day, surrounded by a "cast" of capable associates, which includes Miss Sibyl Brennan, the prima donna, one of the sprightliest bits of femininity on the English-speaking stage; Miss Sedney Martineau, Miss Corinne Pendleton, two pretty talented girls, and Dorothy Dunn, a native of New York, and a rare beauty of the Spanish type, who is a pronounced success. William Edmunds, Harry S. Piper, Lloyd Pedrick, Chad Hurbner, John Dewey, Jay Woodford Ray, and several others are just as prominent.

Ben Teal, a well-known master of stagecraft, has personally supervised the production, and it is his boast that never before in his long career as a producer has he ever given the public anything so elaborate or enjoyable. The play is one in which the radiant talents of the authors and the composers shine. It is coherent and consistent; it contains songs one will whistle, tunes to hum, and ensemble numbers to remember, and has a galaxy of pretty girls in beautiful and gorgeous costumes.

At the Lubin.

The Lubin will offer an extraordinarily attractive bill of vaudeville and pictures for fair week, among the offering being musical, vocal and acrobatic features such as are seldom seen outside of the Metropolitan circuits. Heading the program will be seen the five musical Lovelands, presenting an enjoyable collection of melodious musical numbers, played on a variety of original instruments, offering a repertoire of numbers ranging from the most difficult classical selections to the more popular music. Every member of this quintet of musical artists is a soloist, and their single numbers are the very acme of perfection. The Lubin was especially fortunate in securing this splendid number, which has proven one of the biggest drawing cards in the big circuits, and it was only in response to an urgent request sent the booking agents for a feature that would provide something out of the ordinary that this clever musical feature was obtained.

With them in the amusement-dispensing next week will be Freeman and Fiske, vaudeville's blue ribbon vocalists. Both possess remarkably sweet voices, of wide range. Sytz and Sytz will provide a comedy acrobatic act that not only serves to give them opportunity to introduce many feats of strength, but also to prove their adeptness in clean comedy work, in which their act abounds.

The pictures for the week will be appropriate and of a pleasing variety such as every one—male, female, old and young—will enjoy.

"QUEER" BILL ON MARKET

Chief Willie Says Counterfeit $10 Bill Is a Good One.
Washington, D. C., October 1.—One of the best counterfeit $10 bills of recent years has been discovered by the secret service. The note is such a fine piece of workmanship that Chief Willie, in a warning sent broadcast to-day, declares the bill will give the public a great deal of trouble, particularly on the Pacific Coast.

The bill is a counterfeit of a national bank note on the Pasadena National Bank of Pasadena, Cal. It is composed of two pieces of paper, a front and back stuck together, with the silk fibers between. It has the portrait of President McKinley, and one of the marks which identify it to the public is a bad break in the back of the note is a little lighter than the genuine. The etching and rough work on the back are badly done. It is of the series of 1908, bearing the check letter "F." Chief Willie advises that notes of that issue be carefully examined before acceptance.

he sniffs victory in the air. The Attorney-General had good crowds at every point where he spoke, and the enthusiasm equaled the numbers. There is quite a number of outsiders attending Circuit Court at Clintonwood, and the reports from far and near seem to be that the most sanguine could hope for.

Judge T. M. Anderson and T. J. Muncey have been in the country trying to prove that the salvation of the country lies in the election of Slomp. Slomp buttons and blisters are literally going begging. Never a Time, Says Jersey Democratic Candidate, When Party Lines Were So Loose.

CROWDS OUT TO HEAR HIM

Not Enough Room in Plainfield Hall to Hold Them—Blames Tariff for High Prices.

Plainfield, N. J., October 1.—Dr. Woodrow Wilson, Democratic candidate for Governor of New Jersey, addressed a large audience in Reform Hall here. So great was the crush to hear him that not one-half of those who wanted to could get in the hall, necessitating an overflow meeting.

Feature of his speech was his freedom from everything that would seem like an attack on the Republican party. He was introduced by William L. Saunders, president of the North Plainfield Woodrow Wilson Club.

"I am cheered," said Mr. Wilson, "by the fact that I stand here as the representative of a great body of men who have very definite hopes and purposes with regard to the reformation of government in New Jersey—a body of men, not an isolated man here and there, not a man here and there discontented with the inside of things, but a body of men who have done definite thinking and are moved by definite desires for the betterment of the State of New Jersey."

"There never was a time when party bonds were so loose as they are at this moment in this country. There never was a time when there was more independent thinking being done than is now being done in this country. What is more, there never was a time when that thinking was more generally based upon a sympathy with the common needs of all classes of men."

Then are not stopping now to examine the party labels; they are beginning to examine candidates; they are beginning to ask whether they can rely upon definite promises. And if they are convinced upon these points they are ready to trust aside all antecedent connections and propositions and vote for the man and things that they believe in. I believe that the Democratic opportunity isn't an opportunity to get into a party, but an opportunity to serve the people by carrying out a definite program."

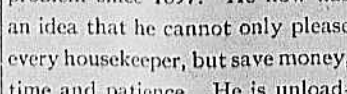

"The Democratic party has strayed at different times through many divers paths, but it has never forgotten its sympathy with the great bodies of toiling men, and it is this sympathy which will sustain and renew any party that continue true to it, for the Democratic party is renewed in our day, not by the rise of new men, but by the impulse of a new time, which naturally expresses itself in new men."

"If I were asked to fit the old party crises, and which is the grander, the state of politics, I should say at once that I didn't see how it was possible, and the difficulty with the party which is now trying to play my part in displacing is that it has stuck to old cries and shibboleths and hasn't noticed the change of the times."

"Why is it that there is a great insurgent movement in the Republican party? It is because great bodies of thoughtful men inside the party are beginning to perceive how that party has—not by movement, but by inertia—not by new policies, but by old-fashioned fuel, the enlightened interest of the present movement. The proof of the Democratic argument is the action of the great, powerful bodies of insurgents within the Republican ranks. All this insurgency is built upon negative lines. It is movement of discontent. More discontent does not produce anything positive."

Taking up the question of regulating corporations, Dr. Wilson continued: "All through this country there have been set up public service commissions intended for the regulation of the public service corporation. In this State Republican legislation has set up a committee to make inquiry. That isn't necessary. We know what is going on and we know what we want a change. It is not necessary to stop for that. All that is to be done is to guide. There is no mystery about the liability act; there has been legislation going on for years and years along that line."

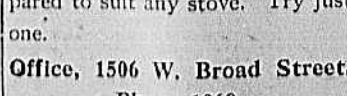

"The public service commission is not intended merely to regulate rates; it is meant to regulate rates by a fair and judicious inquiry; it is not meant merely to register complaints, but to correct abuses, with regard to corporations as well as the public—not merely to serve one side, but to serve both sides by pointing out what parts

ENTIRE BLOCK BURNED

Gulfport, Miss., October 1.—A solid block of buildings was destroyed by fire early yesterday. In the block were the post-office, two hotels, two theatres, several business houses, and a number of frame buildings. The fire started in a barber shop, but the cause is unknown.

The post-office building was an old one, and the government was using it only temporarily.

"And, speaking about the direct primary law, why, there has been direct primary law, such as Governor Hughes, of New York, would have us believe he thought out himself, in Massachusetts, I am saying all this in illustration of the fact that we don't seem to know that other States have been acting on this subject for a long period of time."

"Believe that the tariff can be revised in a way that will not disturb business too much, and will meet the necessity and just demand. Now, what is the cause of the high cost of living? The cause is that the tariff wall has been built so high that business concerns, being absolutely free against the danger of foreign competition, can get together and control prices and cost. It is not the just and reasonable protection the Republican orators used to talk about."

"We have therefore to ask you, as Democrats, do you believe that the Democratic party in New Jersey, as at present constituted, and under its present nominees for office, is going to be the right party? Give us the power and let us misuse it, and we have lost our opportunities and would have lost all opportunity to elect a Democratic President of the United States."

"It is not an easy thing to be asked to be put to test; for my part, I am not interested in the game unless we can test ourselves. I am tired of talk, I wish performance, and if we can deliver the goods, then I am satisfied for one to take a back seat."

TWENTIETH CENTURY BUSINESS.

That Is the Kind That Is Done in the Banks of Greater Richmond.

Census figures are intensely interesting, especially when they show an increase along all lines. The Planters National Bank, of this city, has been publishing some returns of late that show a mighty gratifying increase in the business of this sterling banking establishment. The officials are too modest to explain the reason for this wonderful increase in business, because it is due in such a large measure to the personnel of the bank. Danville, Mick, here is ample backing in the way of capital and general facilities for doing twentieth century business, the kind that is done every year at the Planters National Bank.
